Disasters: Are you ready?

How to Become Immortal

There have been some people who have had their bodies frozen and placed in a cryogenic state. The idea being that at some point in the future you can be brought back to life when the technology allows it.

However, I have a method for you to use today to achieve immortality. Yes, it is available to everyone listening to this Podcast.

It is simple as pie, just share what you know with everyone who cares to listen.

The phrase “knowledge is power” is exactly what I’m talking about. Some people hoard information for themselves or their organization. We’ve all heard someone say, “I could tell you, but then I’d have to kill you.” It is an attitude that expresses the idea that I’m so important that I need to keep this information to myself. If I share it with someone else, that takes away some importance from me—since everyone will then know it.

I’m thinking that most people hearing this maybe nodding their heads saying to themselves, “yes, I’ve met people like that, or lucky that I’m not of that mindset.”

Eric’s Corner is all about sharing what I know with others—like yourself. I figure it does no good for me to know something that others can make use of.

There are folks who send me links to news articles, reports, or best practices that they come across. Much of what you get from me on Eric’s Corner comes via the sharing of information from others.

So, how about it? Are you willing to share what you know? Giving up some “power” in order that others might benefit by having the information that you have.

If so, send it along to me, or just share what you know with others in your daily activities. Then you can join me and the other “immortals” who recognize they will live on long after we’re dead because of the knowledge they shared.
